Good afternoon,

I just wanted to reach back out to thank both of you for all of assistance that you provided to me during this process. Hope & Stephanie you were both very helpful & professional. You are both and assist to Hernando County and they are lucky to have employees who are as knowledgeable, kind & helpful as you are. I would have been lost in this process without your assistance and are so very grateful that you went out of your way to explain everything to me & give me the proper direction. I believe I am all set now as my building is in permitting and I recorded my NCC yesterday. My concrete company (Lakeview Concrete) will be putting their permit soon as well. I owe you both the biggest thank you and wish you both continued success in your current & future roles and lives in general.

Good morning,

The garage can be seen with the home, but it cannot go in front of the home due to being zoned R1C. It looks like the home is 50' back from the front property line according to the single-family home permit. The garage will have to have a minimum 50' front setback.

Good morning,

I have decided to move ahead with shifting the building onto the other lot. I have one final question regarding this move. You stated in the last email "Our area wouldn't have any other restrictions other than meeting the setback and the garage isn't going into the easement. Being that the property is already merged the garage can go on the other lot with no issues other than the easement." My question is with it moving to the other lot does it still need to be behind the front of the house or can it be moved closer to the property line as long as I avoid the front easement?

Subject: Re: Previous Survey (location of easement request)

Good afternoon,

I understand your frustration. The reason your parcel is showing it all as one parcel is because when the plat was made it was two separate parcels, Lot 2 and Lot 3. They were then merged and made into 1 Parcel. That's why that line is grayed out. When the parcels were separated originally there was a 7.5' easement along all side lot lines. Once the lots are merged these easements don't disappear. If you see below when the plat was created Lot 1 and Lot 2 are their own Lots. These easements are created for drainage issues (DWS). Utilities, etc. have to use the easement they have designated areas they use.

The permit for the existing shed that was applied for in 2008 was approved in error. The person who reviewed it then missed the easements. Which is why we always prefer surveys for site plans and not hand drawn site plans.

image.png

Your parcel is zoned R1C which would allow for that type of detached garage to be permitted. You will just apply through civic access. If you need assistance with the permitting process you can reach out to the building department. They will be happy to assist. As a zoning stand point we will review the site plan.

Your area wouldn't have any other restrictions other than meeting the setback and the garage isn't going into the easement. Being that the property is already merged the garage can go on the other lot with no issues other than the easement.

If you have any further questions please feel free to contact me anytime.

Thank you both for your assistance and explanations. I do not see the dotted line in the image. You have both been helpful and I appreciate both of you and do not want you to think my frustrations are directed at either of you. I just do not understand why when you click the property on the site it highlights the entire property not the 2 lots separately. I pay taxes on the whole property not 2 separate properties. My neighbor Chris owns his lot and the lot next to his. When you click there, they highlight separately and show 2 separate properties. On mine when you click, it shows the entire property not the 2 lots separately and also lists the whole property right on what you are calling an easement as lot 2 and not lot 2 and 3. I also do not understand how the county allowed one structure to be permitted and built there then, but I cannot replace it. It seems to me by the visuals of the lot and what it says that this process was already completed. I understand that you are trying to help me.

Now I need another structure or something that is not on mine at all. There are no utilities anywhere near the area. I understand you previously do not control the process, and you have been extremely helpful and I appreciate that. My frustration is lying in what seems to be an outlined process for something that really should be simple. We should be able to take the survey from 2021 since nothing has changed on the property since then and write location of easement on the survey and submit it. But unfortunately, it seems like a catch grab between the counties and business where I must spend close to 10K to even see if I can have it approved.

Yes the process would be a lot cheaper and less of a headache if I placed the new shed 7.5 feet to the right of the grayed out dotted merged line but I do not really want to and it really does not make any sense when there is no reason for an easement to even be there. All of the utilities come in on the other side of the house. Putting this building there had been my plan since I located the home and bought it and I would have known all this I would not have bought the property.

I am not for zoning and building regulations, that's why I reached out to do the right way. I just think there should be a process improvement option for when you run into cases like this. Cases where the property really has no reason for an easement and cases where the county has already permitted and allowed a structure to be placed there. There should be a process where someone from planning and zoning could walk the site with the homeowner (me in this case) and come out from permitting so that a vote on the ground could make a decision that benefited everyone as opposed to having to just fork money out to a survey company for something that is useless because we already have a up to date survey of the property. I understand neither of you make that decision and it's a "process" that has been put in place for good reasons but there should be a way to cut through the red tape in certain circumstances.

Anyway, sorry for rambling. I do appreciate both you and Hope. I appreciate all of the help and information you all have assisted me with. You both have been amazing to work with and Hernando County has a valuable asset to both of you.

Good afternoon,

Unfortunately, there are no other options other than the location of Easement to leave the shed in the existing placement. Like Hope mentioned in her email if you are replacing the existing shed it would be a lot cheaper and less of a headache if you placed the new shed 7.5 feet to the right of the grayed out dotted merged line. There was a 7.5' easement on both sides of the merged line leaving it at a total of 15'. I took a screen shot of your parcel to make sure of what I was trying to describe.

I know this isn't the ideal placement you are wanting to put the new shed. But if there is anything further, we can help you with please reach out and let us know.

Good morning Anthony,

I understand your concerns completely, let me review our options with Stephanie to ensure there are no alternatives we may have overlooked.

If you would prefer to avoid submitting a vacation of easement application, the applicable accessory setbacks would be 7.5 feet from each side and rear property line. This would also apply to either side of the center line of the new-erected lot, resulting in a total setback of 15 feet along the center line.

Thank you for your trust and continued patience through this process!

Good morning,

I was reaching out to verify if there are any other options regarding me having this building built to replace the old shed that was permitted and is on the easement. I am just a homeowner, and this is starting to become an extremely expensive process. I have attached a screen shot below my signature showing what they are trying to charge me for the survey, and the total is like $6,000.00 and that is not including any drainage plan. I don't have that kind of money especially that's here is no guarantee once I go through all this that it will be approved.

I see these building going up all around me in my neighborhood and I am just trying to do things the right way. Are there any other options? If I move the building past the easement a little further, can I avoid all of this? I don't really want to move it because that is the perfect place it's pretty flat and there are no trees there, no utilities running anywhere near there it is really the ideal location but at this point that might be my only option. I apologize for the long read, but I am long running on these situations and all I want to do is replace an old worn out shed with a new storage building.

Good afternoon Hope,

I hope you have had a great week, I have several of the forms ready to upload to the portal and have just a few more remaining. I am having a hard time locating the Tax Clearance Form on the website. I have looked all over and tried to search the form but have not had any luck finding it. Also, in the portal there is now another form that allows us a requirement called Copy Record Plat Dedication for Vacation Petitions and I am unsure what that is. Please advise if you convenience when I may locate that form and what I need to do for the Plat dedication requirement. The only other thing I have left to complete besides these is the survey and then I will be able to load them all in the portal and get my request submitted. I truly appreciate all of your help, you have been a blessing, and I would have been lost without you.

Of course! I appreciate your questions! They're no trouble at all.

If you go to the Property Appraiser's website and use the property search, you can look up your parcel and access the GIS mapping tool. Once the map loads your property, you should be able to zoom out and click on each lot that touches the easement.

When you select a parcel, it should highlight the entire lot. On the left-hand side, you'll see details including the owner's name and the key number. That's the information we're looking for.
I've also attached an image as a reference to help guide you.

I do have one other question from the list below. In regards to the Adjacent Property Owners List. A typed list of all properties bordering the easement (for example, the two lots behind your property), including owner names, addresses, and key numbers.

There is only a retention bond that backs up against your property and the easement. There are neighbors on both sides of the retention pond but the easement kind of splits down the middle of the retention area. Would I still need to create a list of the owner of the retention pond area? If so How do I find out who the retention pond belongs to?

Thank you and sorry if I am being a pain in the butt.

Good afternoon,

I hope you're doing well! I took some time to review the permit history for your property with Stephanie, and we wanted to share what we found.

It looks like the deed that was permitted in 2008 was approved using a hand-drawn site plan. Because of that, the center easements were likely not identified during the permitting process at that time.

We also wanted to let you know that these easements are still active. Even when lots are merged, easements remain in place, and utility companies can still access them if needed. For that reason, a vacation of easement application would still be required.

If you were to apply for your detached garage, our zoning technicians would question the easements and likely defer the application until the vacation of easement was applied for and approved. This is something we pay close attention to in Royal Highlands especially, as easements there are typically 7.5 feet wide on each side which creates that total of 15 feet now located within the center of your property.

Please feel free to reach out if you have any questions, as always I am happy to help!

Good afternoon Hope,

Thank you. I will get started on the list you provided me below. I dug through all my closing discs and I found this survey they gave me at closing. I wanted to share it and get your thoughts. I do see a line going down the property, but it doesn't have the easement listed. It also shows the deed that the previous owners had permitted and built lying right on that easement in the center. Is it possible that the went through the process and had the easement there vacated?

In this case, Stephanie would coordinate with all utility companies that may have an interest in the easements to obtain their approval or denial rather than you having to contact them, being that they are a requirement to move on to the next permitting screen I will show this to our innovations team to see if this is something that needs to be adjusted.

Additionally, I've outlined the required attachments below for clarity: You may find the vacation of easement application on our website for most of the required forms!

- Adjacent Property Owners List: A typed list of all properties bordering the easement (for example, the two lots behind your property), including owner names, addresses, and key numbers.
- Tax Clearance Form: Please take this new form to the Tax Collector's Office for approval.
- Digitally Signed Survey: This must clearly indicate that the easement is "to be vacated" on both the survey drawing and the legal description. You may want to contact the original survey company to request an updated version. An example survey is attached for reference.
- Narrative Letter: A brief letter from you explaining the reason for the request (for example, plans to build a home in the center of the property).
- Proof of Ownership: A copy of your deed.

Please let me know if you have any questions or need assistance with any of these items.

Hope,

Thank you so much. When I purchased the property last year they gave me a different survey and it didn't have the middle property line so I did not even know it was two separate lots until this morning. I went ahead and created an account and started the "Vacation of Easement" application. I was moving through it and came to page 45 attachments. I have included a snap of what it looks like below. Are you or your zoning lead able to provide me with some direction on this step? Will I need to reach out to everyone listed below to obtain something or are there only certain folks from below that I would need to contact. I got a little confused on this page so I figured it was better to stop and ask first. You have been an amazing help so far and I appreciate any further assistance you are able to provide.

Thank you,

Good morning,

The application you will need to submit is called a Vacation of Easement. Through this application, you can request the removal of both 7.5-foot easements located in the middle of the original property. As discussed earlier, you can apply through Civic Access, which will guide you step-by-step through the submission process and outline everything required.

I have also CC'd my Zoning lead, as she is the one who processes Vacation of Easement applications. If you have any additional questions, we are both happy to review and assist you throughout the process.

How would I go about starting the process to possibly have building set over the middle property line between the 2 lots? I know you said it can take a few months so I may want to start that process soon if we end up wanting to build in that area. That area is wide open, and I won't have to remove any trees so that was my first choice. I understand if it is not possible.

Thank you for contacting Development Services

Attached is a copy of a survey that was used in a previous application, feel free to use this as a reference for your necessary structures.

For your parcel, the necessary structure setbacks are as follows:

- 7.5 feet from the rear property line
- 7.5 feet from each side property line
- Must not be located in front of the front two corners of the house

I have attached the RIC general zoning ordinance for your reference. Please feel free to review it, and don't hesitate to email me if you have any questions.

I hope this information is helpful and provides what you need!

For the most current information on your permit, we encourage you to log in to Civic Access. From your dashboard, you can easily view your workflow progress and see where your application is in the review process. Civic Access offers a helpful way to check your permit status and find answers at your convenience, anytime.
